

Cummings' Appearance in Supreme Court Cheers Colleagues in Cabinet

WASHINGTON—The unprecedented action of Homer Cummings in appearing personally before the Supreme Court today to argue a gold case is symbolic. Apparently the Attorney General has awakened to the fact that you can't win law suits without lawyers. Cummings, himself, is an excellent lawyer, but his Justice Department is bogged down with the most lamentable conglomeration of political chair-warmers that ever spit tobacco juice on a cross-roads stove. For that reason Cummings' appearance before the Supreme Court is regarded with great hope by some of his Cabinet colleagues. They hope that this may mark the beginning of new things in the Justice Department.

It has been no secret that this department is regarded by many as the weakest link in the New Deal. With some of the most historic legislation in the Nation's history coming before the Supreme Court, various New Deal departments have complained bitterly at the way Homer Cummings' lawyers were handling their cases.

Basic Liberal

This criticism does not apply to Homer Cummings personally. The Attorney General is one of the most popular members of the Cabinet. He is a hard worker, has a delicious sense of humor, stands well with the President and is in step with the liberal sentiment of the New Deal. Illustrative of that liberal sentiment is an incident experienced by Harold M. Stephens, assistant Attorney General. Stephens needed some good aides, brought in Henry White Edgerton, who was dismissed from the Cornell law school because he was a conscientious objector during the war—though later taken back with apologies. Stephens suggested to Solicitor General Biggs that Edgerton be hired. He explained his fascist leanings, said he had voted for Norman Thomas in 1932. Biggs almost frothed, vetoed the idea. Stephens then went to Homer Cummings, explained Edgerton's background. "Is he a good lawyer?" Cummings asked. Stephens assured him Edgerton was.

"Then put him on." Cummings has a unique record for this type of fair-minded liberalism. But coupled with it he has three faults which have kept the Justice Department out of step with the basic aims of the New Deal. First, he lacks a sense of smell. Second, he is too amiable. Third, he is too political. It is completely understandable why a Government department has a few deserving Democrats planted around the landscape, but it is another thing to let them be loaded in up to the gunnels.

Before Chicago

This is what Homer let his friend Jim do to him. Homer is not only an easy-going giver-inner to Jim Farley, he is something of a politician in his own behalf. If a Democrat bears the "B. C." (Before Chicago) label he is, in the eyes of Homer Cummings, qualified to enter the golden gates no matter what. Thus it was that Cummings insisted on keeping at Attorney General of Puerto Rico, Benjamin J. Horton, who to him. Homer let him stay in the Interior Department and eventually the President wanted removed. Thus it was that he appointed as judge in the 90th cent Negro Virgin Islands, a Negro-hater from Mississippi merely because Pat Harrison was afraid he would run against him in 1936.

Thus it was he appointed as Assistant Attorney General in charge of lands Harry W. Blair, an attorney for a lead company having litigation regarding federal lands, because his wife, Emily Newell Blair was Democratic National Committeewoman from Missouri. Thus also he appointed as an Assistant Attorney General, George

PUMPKIN SHOW TWO WEEKS LATER

OCT. 16 DATE SET TO BEGIN ANNUAL EVENT

Briggs Sets Up Advantage to Farmer By Date Two Weeks Later

CUTS COMPETITION

All Officers and Directors Retain Jobs

The Pumpkin Show society held its first meeting of 1935 Monday evening and voted to stage the big annual affair two weeks later this fall than it has been held in recent years. The dates will be Oct. 16, 17, 18 and 19; in 1934 they were Oct. 3, 4, 5 and 6.

The vote, which was unanimous, came after considerable discussion in which Director Harry J. Briggs stressed the farmers' standpoint. He brought forth the seeding date and other details in such a good argument that the other directors followed his lead. "Last fall," Mr. Briggs said, "when we wanted to stage the pulling contest we had to go out in the fields to get horses that were being worked. As soon as the contest was over we had to immediately return them. It is believed," he declared, "that the show will be much more popular with the farmers if it is later."

FOLLOWS FAIRFIELD

Another factor which resulted in the action was that the show in 1934 competed with eight other exhibitions in Ohio with a result that the number of concessions was cut down considerably. The show again as in years prior to the last three or four comes one week after the big Fairfield fair at Lancaster. The move will be popular with uptown restaurant men. This fact is pointed out, when the show follows the Lancaster fair all employees of concession stands and other workers come here on Sunday and remain the entire week. When the show is before the Lancaster event the workers usually come in on Tuesday. Two more days of business are provided by the show being later.

All officers and directors who served during 1934 were elected and appointed during the evening. Mayor W. B. Cady remains as president by virtue of his office; T. D. Krinn is vice president; R. G. Colville treasurer; Mack Parratt, Jr., secretary; Sterling Lamb assistant secretary; Mr. Colville, director of Dept. 1; L. T. Shaner of Dept. 2; William M. Reid of Dept. 3; G. I. Nickerson of Dept. 4; G. D. McDowell of Dept. 5; L. J. Johnson of Dept. 6; T. D. Krinn of Dept. 7; W. P. Baughman of Dept. 8 and Harry Briggs of Dept. 9.

TO ATTEND BANQUET

All officers and directors are making plans to attend the Ohio Fair Managers banquet in Columbus next week.

3 PROPERTIES ARE SOLD BY SHERIFF

Three Pickaway-co properties were sold at sheriff's sales Monday afternoon conducted by Chief Deputy Bryan Custer with C. G. Chalfin as the auctioneer.

The Lincoln Kirkpatrick land in Perry-town was bid in by McKinley Kirk of Washington C. H. at $71.70 per acre. The tract included about 100 acres and was sold to satisfy a judgment of Claude Herold, Vinton-co.

The McCafferty land in Monroe-town was purchased by White Furness, of Scioto-town, for $63.34 an acre, the total amount being $2,703.98. This sale was a result of a partition action of Roy McCafferty against Alton E. McCafferty.

Sale of the Bell land in Jackson-town, the result of the partition suit of Elizabeth B. Beam against Anna T. Wilbur, et al., resulted in its purchase by Grover Reese and Everett Welch, Scioto-town, for $60.25 an acre. About 100 acres were sold.

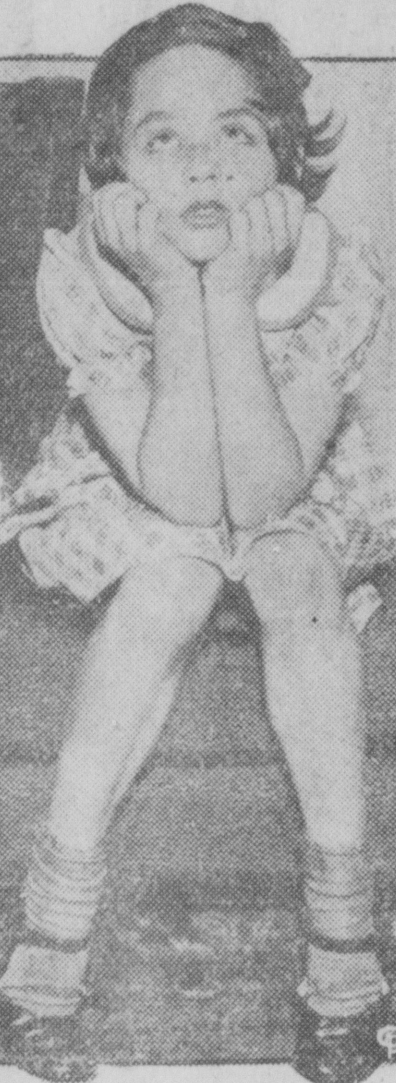

The sale of the Fannie Zwicker property scheduled to satisfy a claim of the Pickaway-co Finance Co. was cancelled with the action settled and dismissed.

PNEUMONIA FATAL TO SLAGLE CHILD

MRS. STEWART TAKEN AT 67

Williamsport Woman, Wife of Bank Officer, Is Stricken While In Kitchen.

Mrs. Emma Stewart, 67, wife of John Stewart, director of the Farmers' National bank, Williamsport, died suddenly at 4:30 p. m. Monday in the kitchen of her home. Apoplexy was blamed for the cause of death.

Mrs. Stewart had a few minutes before her demise bid good-bye to several callers. Her husband was in the basement firing the furnace when he heard her body strike the floor.

She was one of Williamsport's best known and most active women. Mrs. Stewart was an active member of the Methodist Episcopal church, of the Women's Foreign Missionary society and of the W. C. T. U.

The funeral will be held Thursday at 2 p. m. at the Methodist church with Rev. W. A. Moore officiating with interment in Springlawn cemetery by C. E. Hill.

Mrs. Stewart was born May 19, 1867, in Ross-co, a daughter of Christian and Magdalena Schein. She and Mr. Stewart married April 13, 1890. Her husband is her only close survivor. The late Noah Schein was a brother.

COURT ROOM DARK AS BRUNO IS NAMED

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 8.—Lights in Flemington's historic court house went out suddenly today just after Amandus Hochmuth, elderly witness, identified Bruno R. Hauptmann as the man he had seen in an automobile near Hopewell, N. J., on March 1, 1932—the day Baby Lindbergh was kidnapped.

"Wasn't that dramatic?" Chief Defense Counsel Edward J. Reilly asked sarcastically of reporters in a recess a few minutes later. "I wonder who turned them out?" Court attaches said a wire break caused the light failure.

FISCHER ADDRESSES TEACHERS OF CITY

TEN ROSS-CO STILLS FOUND

Federal, State Men Raid Tar Hollow, Source of Much Illegitimate Liquor.

The source of a lot of the "boot-leg" whiskey which has been reported coming into Circleville and other Ohio cities in recent months was in the hands of federal and state officers today after a raid on Tar Hollow, south of Adelphi in Ross-co, Monday afternoon.

Ten stills, 11,000 gallons of mash and 100 gallons of whiskey were confiscated in the raid.

Three men, Earl H. Dearth, 18, of Chillicothe; Charles W. Hunt, 31, and Shirley McDonald, 29, both of near Laurelville, are being held in jail and will be arraigned Monday before the U. S. Commissioner in Chillicothe. They were arrested during the raid.

The stills with a combined capacity of 3,050 gallons were found within a radius of a mile.

CHILLICOTHE, Jan. 8.—Four Ross-co roadhouses were raided over the week-end. Four gallons of moonshine and a case of six per cent beer were found at the Blue Gable Inn on the Scioto Trail, Sheriff Joe Vincent announced. No criminal charges will be filed, he said, but the roadhouse's license to sell 3.2 per cent beer will be revoked. In a raid at the Log Cabin, south of this city, three persons were arrested and booked on a statutory charge.

TWO CONTROL PENDULUM OF LOWER HOUSE

Deibel and King Form Insurgent Group; Allow Bitter Election

HAMILTON BEATEN

Switch To Put G. O. P. Clerks Across

COLUMBUS, Jan. 8.—Control of the Ohio house of representatives rested today not with the Democrats who named the speaker and clerk or the Republicans who had a majority of one member, but with a small group of Republican insurgents.

Voting with the 67 Democrats they elected Rep. J. Freer Bittenger, Ashland, speaker; refraining from voting, they made it possible for the Democrats to name Ex-Rep. Fred Elsass, Sidney, as clerk, and, finally going along with their own party, they turned down the Democratic slate of minor house officers and elected those proposed by the Republican caucus.

DEIBEL IS LEADER

Mainstay of the little band of Republican irregulars was Rep. Edmond Deibel, Medina, who braved the cat calls and jeers of his colleagues and the house gallery to bolt the candidacy of Rep. Arthur Hamilton, Lebanon, the Republican's nominee for speaker.

Hinting at political intrigue, Deibel stated boldly that "selfish interests" dictated his party's nomination for speaker, adding that "I owe my duty first to my constituents, my party comes second."

He was joined by Rep. E. R. King, (R) McArthur, in voting against Hamilton. King declared "sinister influences are at work in our party" and hoped that his vote would "initiate the beginning of the return of the Republican party to a leadership devoted to interests of the common people."

Rep. B. L. Cressy (R) Andover, voted. In a raid at the Log Cabin, south of this city, three persons were arrested and booked on a statutory charge.

First defeat of the Democratic minority at the hectic organization session came when the insurgents re-elected the Republican majority, first to reject the minority nominees for sergeants-at-arms and minor clerks, then to help their party put across its own selections for these offices.

MINOR JOBS LISTED

Harvey Hammond, Knox, was elected sergeant-at-arms; Herbert Knisley, Tuscarawas, first assistant; O. S. Creighton, Washington, second assistant; John Sugden, Summit, third assistant; James

Flemington Court Room Showing Strain of Trial

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 8.—Stirling with heat and humanity, the little court room here where Bruno Richard Hauptmann's life is hanging in the balance already is showing the strain of proceedings which observers estimate will last from four to six weeks.

Only four days old, the proceedings already have the jurors tossing in their seats. Attorney General David T. Wilentz's temper is not quite so restrained as at first. More and more frequently spectators burst into unrestrained laughter. More and more frequently they are reprimanded by Justice

Thomas W. Trenchard. And more and more frequently the judge is rising to trod back and forth behind the bench.

STAMPEDE FOR SEATS

Curious walk on each other's feet in the twice-daily stampede for seats—and the former prevailing good fellowship takes a left to the jaw. Now the business of getting a seat has become deadly serious and an issue for unsmiling jostling and shoving and crabbing.

The harried telegraph messengers are no more the hall-fellow-well-met group of those first few days—and press and telegraph rooms have become veritable madhouses.

It was the signal for collapse of Betty Gow, who established herself on the stand as a little lady—and an admirable one. It is the signal, too, for numerous wranglings by attorneys. Time and again they close in on each other, barking, yelling, jumping up with objections, sending the high-strung audience into gales of laughter.

The heat in the tiny room, which has held tremendous crowds since the opening of the trial, is intense. To all appearances the coolest man in the place is Attorney General Wilentz, sleek, black-haired, perfectly-groomed—who drinks glass after glass of water and mops his brow incessantly, pulling his white handkerchief from his breast pocket with dash, waving it, and replacing it in an instant.

FEAR TANK SHIP'S CREW LOST AT SEA

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 8.—Fear for the safety of 25 to 35 men in the crew of the British oil tanker La Cresenta was expressed here today.

The tanker, enroute from Port San Luis to Japan with 62,000 barrels of crude oil, was overdue two weeks in the Orient.

She was last reported 900 miles northeast of Hawaii.

An ominous message was relayed here yesterday by another British tanker, the Athelbeach.

"Passed through pools of oil 35-02 north latitude, 164 west longitude. British tanker La Cresenta last heard from that vicinity."

Carper To Receive Hearing For Parole

Carper, a resident of Whisler, Pickaway-co., is serving a one to 20 year term. The badly decomposed body of his father was found in a woods several weeks after he was reported missing.

"JAFSIE" NEXT STAR WITNESS IN LINDY CASE

Defense Is Expected to Train Its Big Guns on $50,000 Negotiator

WILL NAME "JOHN"

Betty Gow Proves Asset To State Case

By JAMES L. KILGALLAN
COURTROOM, Flemington, N. J., Jan. 8.—Amandus Hochmuth, an 87-year-old resident of Hopewell, N. J., left the witness stand today at the murder trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann and dramatically placed his hand on the defendant saying he was the man he saw in an automobile near Hopewell on the morning of March 1, 1932.

It was on that night baby Lindbergh was kidnapped.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 8.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann's defense was preparing today to train its big guns on Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon, the Lindbergh negotiator who is soon to be called to the stand as a star witness for the state.

Already Edward J. Reilly, the big, blase chief counsel for the defense, is laying ground work for an attack on Condon who is expected to say on the stand that Hauptmann is the man to whom he paid over the $50,000 ransom in St. Raymond's cemetery in the Bronx.

Reilly, in cross-examining Miss Betty Gow, the Lindbergh baby's nurse, asked her if she was a visitor with Violet Sharpe on a boat owned by Dr. Condon prior to the kidnapping. Her answer was "no." Miss Sharpe, who committed suicide during the Lindbergh investigation, was a maid employed in the home of Mrs. Anne Lindbergh's mother at Englewood, N. J.

When Reilly interrogated Col. Charles A. Lindbergh last Friday he asked the father of the slain baby if it ever occurred to him that "Jafsie" might have inserted the ransom advertisements in the Bronx newspaper and answered them himself. Lindbergh, however, expressed complete confidence in Dr. Condon.

In questioning Mrs. Elsie Whately, widow of the late Ollie Whately the Lindbergh butler, Reilly asked her if it was not a fact that she and her husband had known Dr. Condon when they lived in New Rochelle, N. Y., in 1930 and 1931.

Condon may not go on the stand until tomorrow. After several police officers testify today, the state plans to call Col. Henry Breckinridge, close personal friend of Lindbergh and John Peronne, the Bronx taxi driver who says Hauptmann gave him $1 to deliver a note to Condon's home. There-

SALES TAX AIDES TO BE APPOINTED

COLUMBUS, Jan. 8.—Appointment of more than 100 agents to aid county treasurers throughout Ohio in selling sales tax coupons to merchants will be announced within a few days by the state treasurer's office, Harry S. Day, of Fremont, state treasurer, told the "sales tax meeting" of county treasurers here today.

Day also was able to still complaints of many county officials over their allegedly low "cut" for handling the stamps by a statement that the state treasurer's office had drawn up an amendment to be submitted to the legislature which will change the county treasurer's share from one-tenth of one per cent to a flat one per cent.

Although Day declared that he anticipated some objection from the county treasurers over the plan to establish agencies inasmuch as it would withdraw revenue from their office, he said that consideration of the public and merchants "must come first."

ROSE IS SPEAKER

Rev. W. B. "Uncle Bill" Rose, venerable minister, made a fine talk before the Kiwanis club Monday evening using "The Golden Rule" as his text. He stressed the value of service and said: "Our greatest mission in life is service." Kenick W. Dunlap, of Pickaway-town, attended the meeting as a new member.

"RUNNING HOG WILD"

A WISCONSIN jurist, inspired by the rising toll of death and injury and the appearance before him of an unending succession or reckless and drunken drivers, observed that "motorists appear to be running hog wild."

This conclusion can be supported by any careful motorist who is required to make his way on the highways against the competition of drivers without the least regard for the rights of others, or by pedestrians who venture down from the curb at the risk of their lives.

Shocking statistics show that every fifteen minutes in the year that just ended someone was killed in an automobile accident; every thirty-one seconds someone was injured on the streets and highways.

Motor vehicle authorities and police have conducted campaigns of education and editors have viewed with alarm. The courts have issued solemn warnings and legislators have insisted that there ought to be a law.

Nevertheless, the cowardly hit-and-run drivers have grown in number and citizens are being tossed up on the curb to be picked up by some bystander and taken to the hospital. Others are being forced off the road and into a ditch or telegraph pole.

The year 1934 closed with an all-time high record of 35,000 traffic deaths and about one million injuries. It is a death toll as great as the number of Americans killed in battle during the World war.

What are the causes? They are numerous. Primarily, however, responsibility lies with the human element—the person at the wheel, who may be drunk or sober, careful or reckless.

In addition, they include the manufacturers who produce high-speed models for which there is no legitimate need, and the presence on the highways and streets of ramshackle cars, defective in many ways and unfit for use.

UPWARD

IF there is anything in this state-of-mind stuff, the American people have been in the state of mind for a depression these last five years and are now in the state of mind for a speedy economic recovery.

The psychological change which has taken place in the last few weeks is remarkable. It proves again, as it was proved in 1929, that the American mind is susceptible to quick changes.

Business has become infected with the new spirit. Steel, the backbone of the industrial body, is doing things in a big way, which means that there is renewed activity in many other lines, including railroading.

The stock market during the last few days has been reminiscent of the boom days from which one can draw but one conclusion, that the investing public considers the bottom reached and the long awaited upward trend begun. It has been the sort of a market which breathes confidence of an enduring sort.

Pessimism is dead! Long live optimism!

POLITICS MIXES IN CRIME

DIRECTOR Hoover, of the division of investigation of the United States department of justice, gave expression to a bright ideal when speaking before the federal crime conference. He said that law enforcement officers should be appointed on the basis of merit, and not be "forced to seek office from some political ward-heeler."

"In too many communities the requisites are an ability to vote for the right man and a pandering instinct necessary to hold a position which can be plucked away—at the displeasure of a political boss." The condition is exactly as described by Mr. Hoover. Unfortunately, it is not one that can be remedied easily under our present system of government.

The great leader is one who never permits his followers to discover that he is as dumb as they are.

The battle of the bonus will be a chief debate before congress. You can't keep a good fight down, or a bad one, either.

In searching about for a proper classification for Huey Long we find that he doesn't even qualify as a noble experiment.

Little Sister
by MARGARET WIDDER

READ THIS FIRST:

After reading a letter from her reckless young sister, Bet, announcing her proposed elopement with a carpenter, Lella Madison rushes to New York from her suburban home where she lives with her Aunt Maudie. The sisters are orphans and members of an old Westchester family. Arriving outside her sister's apartment, Lella, who virtually is engaged to Orion Johnston-Hedges, her aristocratic neighbor, runs into Jerry Redmond. He, too, as a roommate at Yale of the brother of Bet's fiance, is striving to halt the elopement. Jerry saves the day. The bridegroom is Addison Huntington, a romantic radical, masquerading as Stark Freeman. Lella and Jerry find Bet and her roommate, Edna, waiting for Addy. He arrives a moment later. Jerry tells Addy the police want to question him about an acquaintance of his named Jarecki so they disguise Addy in girl's clothes. The police arrive and promise to return when they cannot find Stark Freeman, one remaining on guard outside the apartment. Jerry explains why he is trying to save Addy from the police. (NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 10

FINALLY LELLA'S curiosity—mixed with suspicion that the news might have something to do with their present mess—got too much for her.

"What are you writing in that book?" she demanded.

He smiled at her; a bright and winning smile.

"Did you ever know a reporter who wasn't doing the great American novel?" he demanded.

"I never knew a reporter," she said coldly.

"You remind me of the old wheeze, 'How do you pronounce Chicago here? We never pronounce it at all.'"

All right, lady, I am completely wilted. But after all, you asked me. And I told you the truth. People never do believe the Irish."

"Are you Irish?"

"Well, there were some kings, a few hundred years back. My own glorious branch of the Redmonds got here not as long ago as that."

"Thank you, Tim. Sorry I was rude. Usually I'm a little angel of politeness and control—the sensible elder sister and all that. I—"

Lella did not know how touchingly helpless her eyelashes made her at this moment—"I'm having rather a hard afternoon."

Jerry smiled his dazzling smile at her again. "Sure, you're having a rotten time. Never mind, you poor kid. I'll see you through it. Here are the policemen both back. Brace up."

"He had, as Lella was to learn with fury, before all was through, a habit of whistling appropriate music practically whenever he wasn't talking. He began to render the music of—"

"Taking consideration with another."

"A policeman's lot is not a happy one . . ."

In time to the heavy footsteps of the force, who, hot and weary, were making their final inquisition for Addison and his comrade, Mr. Jarecki.

"What do we do now?" demanded Lella.

"Sit tight, or rather, get up and greet the dawn. Here it is, coming round to dig us out of our pretty little love-nest."

He rose to his feet, helping Lella, as the policemen appeared.

"Oh, here you are, Redmond," said the policeman who was the older acquaintance. "You got patience, I'll bet that for you. Well, if the Freeman guy is here, Buck will find him. Knows him by sight. Little skinny,

"Patience, sweetheart!"

sandy guy, didn't you say. Buck?"

Bet bristled, and would have insulted an officer of the law if Jerry hadn't put a hand over her mouth.

"All right, officer," said Jerry politely. "Gaze at us. One black-haired girl, one taller chestnut girl, one sitting artistic girl, one sandy girl, one full-size reporter with whiskers to deceive you."

The policeman grinned reluctantly. "All right, to. Names, and you can get out."

Jerry became courteous and business-like. Lella noticed with reluctant approval that he knew when to fool and when to be serious.

"You know who I am—Redmond, free-lance, and special correspondent for the Evening Globe, when I'm not at home. The lady who is at work is Miss Berry. These other girls are Elizabeth and Lella Madison, and their friend, Grace Perkins. They drove in today to see Miss Berry. They live in Fernwood Manor. You probably saw their car downstairs."

"And the one that paints is fond of the Freeman guy," said the policeman ponderously.

Jerry edged up closer and began to whisper.

"Exactly. That's where I come in. I want an exclusive story. 'Chum of Westchester society girl falls for racketeer. Schoolmate of girl head of well-known Heathcote kennels. Persuades her back to the social round.' Comes in with prize-winning Scottie Heathcote—Heathcote's Queen, to take her to family estate. Chum refuses. Love and art are all that matter! I want it for next Sunday."

"Well, you got a nerve, you newspaper boys. I thought you just wanted a line in a column." (Bet shuddered as this horrible idea was offered. She had met the tabloids before.) "Well, it might help catch the little Freeman guy at that. I don't think he was the one that really had much to do with the funny money," said the policeman tolerantly. "Seemed one of these honest little mutts I remember. Jarecki's the bird we really want, only we got to jug Freeman first and get the dope."

The lady in Bet's blue suit opened her mouth and stepped forward in dignantly. Jerry's iron hand clamped down on her narrow shoulder. The policeman scarcely noticed; he loved society. "Which is Miss Madison's sister that has the kennels?" he asked reverently.

"This one," Jerry indicated Lella. "Miss Lella Madison of Westchester and Park avenue," he lied brightly. "The other lady is her friend, Miss Perkins; you remember her; she took the prize for the best costume at the Beaux-Art ball."

He held Miss Perkins firmly down.

"Awright. You can go. And believe me, it's so great to us to go messing round riding herd on pink nuts," said the policeman confidentially, as to an equal. He moved away, his boots sounding enormously on the bare floor in the hot dusk.

Jerry took a long breath and removed his hand from his friend's shoulder. Lella felt very limp inside, as if a tidal wave had just gone round the other way. Bet began to weep loudly.

"Oh, do stop that," Lella said wearily.

The rest, like the end of most exciting struggles, was tame. Jerry, escorting the middle-sized, rather awkward lady who was Addison, passed out with the girls and Jane.

"All right, buddy. Pass along. Mail me a copy of the paper, kid. The name's Flynn, Seventh precinct."

"Sure, you'll see it in the paper," Jerry assured him benignly. They went. "Goodbye, Miss Berry. You're a good sport. I hope it comes out right," he dared to throw over his shoulder.

"Thanks a lot," said Edna Berry, and shifted her mirrors and painted on.

"I would like," said Addison from under his scarf, in as proud and injured a voice as Bet's own, as they gained the street, "to find a place where I can roll my shirt sleeves down."

"Patience, sweetheart," said Jerry cheerily. "Lella, gimme the keys."

She was past asserting herself; she felt like the over-worked woman of the old suffrage story she had heard Mrs. Johnston-Hedges quote: "If there is anything the menfolk will do, let 'em do it!"

COMMON PLACES

After Heine
Rain on the face of the sea,
Rain on the sodden land,
And the window-pane is blurred with rain
As I watch it, pen in hand.

Mist on the face of the sea,
Mist on the sodden land,
Filling the vales as daylight fades,
And blotting the desolate sand.

Voices from out of the mist,
Calling to one another:
"Hath love an end, thou more than friend,
Thou dearer than ever brother?"

Voices from out of the mist,
Calling and passing away;
But I cannot speak, for my voice is weak,
And . . . this is the end of my lay.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Her beauty fanned the flames of jealousy in the hearts of two men who loved her! One tried to win the love which she gave so freely to another—and their three lives were almost ruined by the spectre of suspicion!

This dramatic theme receives a poignant treatment in Columbia's "Jealousy," which opens tonight at the Cliftona Theatre with Nancy Carroll, George Murphy and Donald Cook in the principal roles.

One moment of jealousy—and a lifetime of anguish—lived in ten seconds! Briefly, the story concerns the dramatic consequences resulting from a prizefighter's suspicion that his wife is unfaithful! An exciting blend of romance, comedy and pathos makes up the film.

Comedy, drama and music—offered by the largest collection of stage, screen and radio stars ever seen together—feature the most unusual entertainment at the Grand theatre in many months. The production, which opened Sunday night, is Universal's "Gift of Gab."

The story of "Gift of Gab" concerns itself with the rise of Edmund Lowe from an auctioneer to the foremost broadcasting announcer and reporter in America. Lowe and Gloria Stuart, blonde and more beautiful than ever, furnish plenty of thrills as he rises and falls on the way to the top.

Neglect of Simple Cyst
A Dangerous Procedure

These Tumors, Usually Harmless, May Become Malignant If Treatment Is Delayed

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

MANY PERSONS believe cysts and tumors are cancerous. Of course, the tumor may be malignant in its nature but in most cases it is likely to be harmless and not at all dangerous to the health and life of the afflicted person. In most instances, a cyst is a perfectly harmless tumor. By this I do not mean that it should be neglected.

One of the most common types of cyst is that known as a "sebaceous cyst."

This form of tumor is commonly found on the skin, especially of the scalp, behind the ear, or it may be in the armpit. As a rule it is always found in an area of the body where hair is present.

The sebaceous glands are found in the skin and manufacture an oily secretion. The sebaceous cyst is formed by an obstruction of the outlet of a sebaceous gland. As a result of this obstruction the material normally expelled by the gland accumulates within it, leading to the formation of a cystic mass.

This mass or tumor may grow rapidly, but usually it grows slowly and eventually may reach an amazing size. Cysts as large as a hen's egg located in the scalp are not at all uncommon.

Occasionally the cyst may rupture and expel its contents. But the opening may close and there is a reformation of the tumor mass. In that case the cyst will regain its former size.

Contrary to popular belief, a cyst can be cured only by complete surgical removal. The application of ointments and salves is of no avail and sometimes may prove irritating.

A Simple Operation

Unfortunately, many persons neglect this simple trouble. Many avoid medical attention because they fear the knife. But the operation is so simple, there is no need for alarm. It is performed in the doctor's office and need cause no disability. A local anesthetic is used, preventing all pain.

Frequently I am asked whether neglect of a cyst or simple tumor is dangerous. I advise the removal of all cysts because neglect may lead to irritation and infection. An infected cyst is painful, requiring prolonged care and even after the delayed operation is performed. Much time and discomfort are saved by early attention.

Many authorities believe that prolonged irritation and neglect of a simple tumor or cyst may lead to cancer. Of course, this does not mean that every cyst has in it this possibility, but the remote possibility must not be overlooked.

Do not confuse a cyst with a boil or other skin infection. Unless infected a cyst is painless. It grows slowly in most cases and causes no discomfort. But it is annoying and disfiguring. Certainly it is wise to have it removed.

MONDAY CLUB STUDIES PSYCHOLOGY AT MEETING

The Monday club met in regular session Monday evening in the trustee's room in Memorial hall with Mrs. Hildeburn Jones, the president, presiding.

The program was given by the psychology division of which Mrs. Clark Hunsicker is chairman.

"The Psychology of Dreams" was the subject of a paper by Mrs. Howard Jones. She said in part: "People have always been interested in dreams and suspected that they were symbolical. Today we ponder our dreams and search them for a meaning. Dreams have been considered either as foolish visions or as solemn warnings from the Gods. They are neither. They are important productions of human mind and in a few years it is predicted that physicians while treating physical ailments will make it their business to inquire about their patients' dreams."

"Dream interpretation is not idle pastime. It reveals to us our attitude to every problem of life for we spend our nights seeking solutions to our problems. Today every book on psychology devotes much time to dreams."

Mrs. John Dunlap Sr. in her paper on "The Psychology of Fear" said among other things: "We think our thoughts and acts are consciously determined and their motives fully known to us, that they are free from bias, superstition and prejudice. On the contrary, it can be shown that thinking plays a small part in our lives; that we are controlled by cravings, fears, urges, jealousies and hopes which seethe below the level of consciousness in the unconscious mind and that it is this dynamic part of the mind, which, unknown to us, pulls the strings regulating the greater part of what we think, do and feel. ## FIND MUCH WASTE OF ALFALFA SEED

Experiments Show Rates of 10 to 12 Pounds An Acre Are Right.

A lot of alfalfa seed is wasted in Ohio each year.

Although seeding rates of 20 to 25 pounds an acre are frequently recommended, farm experience and experiment station trials in Ohio point to 10 or 12 pounds as the best seeding rate on most soils.

This information is contained in a publication entitled "Alfalfa in Ohio," now being distributed by the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station.

The bulletin, over a hundred pages long, sums up the results of more than a score of years of experimental work in Ohio with the crop.

Seed rates of over 10 pounds an acre gave no increase in yields of hay, and indeed, even an increase from 7½ pounds to 10 increased the yield only 4 per cent, it is stated in the bulletin.

Neither does thick seeding lead to a higher percentage of leaves, or to a more valuable hay. The same appears to be true as to the protein contents of crops seeded at different rates.

Eight pounds are as little as one would usually care to risk sowing under even the most favorable conditions, and if 15 pounds will not give a satisfactory stand, there is no use in throwing still more seed away, concludes the bulletin.

Owing to the current shortage of alfalfa and other legume seeds, it is expected that farmers will be more economical in their use next spring, in the opinion of C. J. Willard, one of the authors of the bulletin.

IOWA, INDIANA LEAD PARADE; STATE VICTOR

Both Unbeaten as Big Ten Race is Enlivened; State Comes From Behind.

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—Four games in which Illinois whipped the title-defending Purdue quintet and Wisconsin defeated a strong Northwestern five, today left Iowa and Indiana leading the Western conference basketball race.

While the Illini were fighting an uphill battle to eke out a 37 to 36 victory over Purdue at Champaign last night Wisconsin held Northwestern almost powerless at Madison to win by a 16 to 9 count.

Iowa scored its second Big Ten victory of the season with a 39 to 29 decision over Chicago at Iowa City.

In an overtime game at Ann Arbor, Mich., Ohio State defeated Michigan, 33 to 30.

BOTH UNBEATEN

Iowa and Indiana, undefeated, head the conference standings. Minnesota, considered a strong championship threat, has yet to play its first conference opponent.

A late rally by Illinois accounted for Purdue's first defeat of the year. Frank Froeschauer was the victors' mainstay in the hard fought battle, scoring 13 points with his six baskets and free throw.

Purdue held a 20 to 17 lead at the half. Six thousand fans witnessed the battle.

Wisconsin presented an air tight defense that held Lyle Fisher, Northwestern's star forward to one field goal. Ed Stege, Badger center, starred for Wisconsin with three baskets and three free throws. At the half the score was tied 6 to 6. A capacity crowd of 8,550 saw the game.

Iowa's quintet was off to a flying start in the first half and the period ended, despite a Chicago rally, at 16 to 12.

SPIES FEATURE

Ohio State and Michigan went into the overtime period knotted at 25 all after the Buckeyes had come from behind midway in the second half. At the half Ohio State was trailing 15 to 10, but came back with a rush. A six point scoring spree by Michigan in the last two minutes of the regulation time forced the overtime period.

CANTON MENTOR TO KENT STATE?

CANTON, Jan. 8.—Despite persistent denials from Kent, Jimmy Aiken, who coached Canton McKinley to the mythical Ohio interscholastic football championship last fall, will be appointed coach at Kent State college within the next two weeks it was reported here today.

The report also declared that Russ Beichley, Akron West high mentor, would be named assistant to Aiken in the new set-up at the Kent school.

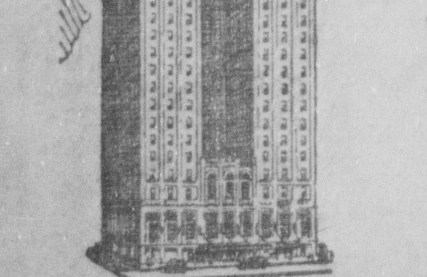

According to the report, official announcement of Aiken's appointment as athletic director and head football coach to succeed Joe Bega will be made at a meeting of the Kent state board of trustees on Jan. 15.

Aiken will receive a salary of $1,500 a year and will sign a three-year contract, it was said. It was further stated that Aiken is planning to have several members of his Canton championship squad enroll at Kent in the fall as the nucleus of his initial team.

BOWLERS DEFEATED

Two Circleville bowling teams took it on the chin Sunday at Washington C. H. The Bakers were beaten 2904 to 2523, while the Circleville Five dropped before the Sabina Merchants rolling only 2194 against 2571.

On the Baker team were Boggs, Riggins, Elisea, Campbell and Baker while Pearce, M. Baker, Goodman, Wolfe and B. Campbell rolled with the Circleville five.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

DYE BEATS MICHIGAN

Last fall Bill Beltner, Ohio State's cage captain, told the writer that Ohio would split even on its cage games this year—that seems to be what may happen—During the pre-Big Ten season the Bucks won four and lost three—In games played so far in the Big Ten they have split even losing to Iowa but defeating Michigan, which event came last night, 33-30, with Tippy Dye caging two goals in an overtime period.

WHAT? BASEBALL?

An untired outfield comprised of Radcliff, Washington and Dan Hefey and a poor catching staff of Shea, Ruel, Calthamer and Fennar are important cogs in the success of Chicago's White Sox—Cincinnati has sent two athletes to Newark of the International league in the Sammy Byrd deal—They are Kleinhans, who wore the Columbus uniform for a short while, and Nolan Richardson, infielder.

When Paderewski, Noted Pianist, Served as Polish Prime Minister

Ignace Jan Paderewski

At the piano

IT IS A FAR cry from stardom to the career of a musician. But Ignace Jan Paderewski was both. An accomplished pianist, Paderewski often has been regarded as the world's greatest master of the keys. At the same time, he was one of Poland's greatest patriots. By the time the World War broke out, he had reached fame with his piano ability. Then living in the United States, he did everything in his power to arouse sympathy for his homeland of Poland. After the war, he immediately went to Warsaw where he organized the first real government of Poland had more than 100 years. He became prime minister.

STRENGTH OF BUCKEYE TEAMS TO GET RIGID TEST THIS WEEK

DELAWARE, Jan. 8.—Comparative strength of Buckeye conference basketball teams will be afforded this week when each of the five plays at least one league game.

Marshall, whose early season games have been few, will be tested at Delaware tonight when the Thundering Herd meets Ohio Wesleyan, which successfully opened its drive for another Buckeye title by defeating Miami, 35 to 14, last Saturday night.

OHIO MEETS DAYTON

Ohio university, after a strenuous campaign of four games last week in which the Bobcats dropped three, will attempt to get back into a winning stride Tuesday night when they play Dayton at Athens in a non-conference contest. The 'Cats will open their conference season against Miami at Oxford Saturday night.

After playing a few early season games within its own bailiwick, Cincinnati will launch into its conference campaign against Marshall at Huntington Saturday night. The only other game involving a Buckeye team this week will find Ohio Wesleyan at Dayton Saturday night.

COLUMBIAN PLAN NOW IN DISCARD

COLUMBUS, Jan. 8.—Twenty-four thousand depositors of the Columbian Building and Loan Co. will receive a 15 per cent dividend amounting to about $2,350,000 soon as a result of the scrapping of a proposed plan for reorganization into a mortgage, loan and real estate company. A petition for approval of a reorganization plan will be withdrawn from court.

GAS FIGHT COSTLY

COLUMBUS, Jan. 8.—The long drawn-out gas fight in which this city has engaged with the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. since 1924 has cost the city $302,431. City Attorney John L. Davies has revealed.

MIAMI IN DUMPS

Marshall also may have possibilities, but these will not be known until after the Herd has met Ohio Wesleyan and Cincinnati this week. Miami appears definitely out of the picture unless Coach Johnny Maurer can inject more scoring punch into his team which failed to make a field goal against the Bishops last Saturday night until after the second half had opened.

Ohio Wesleyan and Ohio have played two common opponents and the scores of these games would indicate a slight Bishop advantage. Ohio Wesleyan swamped Western Reserve, 47 to 33, and Reserve beat Ohio, 50 to 40. Akron Goodyear, the other quintet played by both the Bishops and Bobcats, won from Ohio Wesleyan, 38 to 34, and from Ohio, 39 to 36. The Bishops and Cincinnati have played no common foes, but Cincinnati and Ohio each met Wilmington and won from the latter by the same 32-point margin. The Bearcats won 52 to 20, and Ohio 50 to 18.

ASHVILLE SCHOOL NOTES

Miss Ferguson, teacher of the first grade, is back at work again. The second grade children have started the study of the North Land. Their first character will be the Eskimo.

Dick Messick has had his tonsils removed. We hope Dick will soon be back with us.

The second grade will soon begin their study of birds. A new book "Traveling with the Birds" will prove helpful.

Elmina Morrison, of grade six, was absent several days last week due to sickness.

When the Columbian achievement tests for December and January were given in grade six the following people stood high in their respective studies: Arithmetic—Jane Stevenson; Geography—Ray Kraft; History—Ester Smith; English—Ruth Ann Sark; Health—Bill Seales and Jarold Roese; Reading—Harold Myers.

The sixth grade students spent the first part of their opening exercises Wednesday morning in relating their experiences during the Christmas holidays. Several of them had seen Harding's Memorial at Marion and the Methodist Children's home at Delaware.

The following eighth grade pupils made the highest scores in the December-January Columbian Achievement tests: Reading—Bernard Walden; History—Bernard Walden; Arithmetic—Mary Margaret Carley; English—Mary Margaret Carley; Health and Science—Thomas Buzzard. Highest total score—Mary Margaret Carley.

County Superintendent G. D. McDowell visited the eighth grade last week.

The boys' basketball team of Ashville high school kept its slate clean by defeating New Holland 23 to 13 at New Holland last Thursday night, and also taking Circleville into camp by a 40 to 21 score, Saturday night, at Ashville. Both games were fast and hard fought; Ashville, however, took the lead in both encounters immediately after the whistle blew, and retained it throughout the entire games.

The boys' second team, however, lost to Circleville's second team 36 to 10. This Friday, Ashville plays host to Jackson.

MAY NAME NONE

Reilly, who last week promised on next Thursday to name "two women and at least two men" as the kidnapers, is still casting a lot of mystery around the identity of these four persons. Doubt is now arising that he will specifically name any four persons.

In the meantime Reilly is drawing the names of a lot of persons into the case in a manner which is provoking all kinds of conjecture. For example, he asked Miss Gow if she had corresponded with young men in Detroit, where she had worked for about six months in 1930. She had not.

"Did you ever know a man there named Abe Wagner?" he asked her.

"No," she replied.
Wagner was identified with the notorious "Purple Gang" of Detroit. For a time during the Lindbergh case investigators ran down clues tending to involve the "Purple Gang" but these leads were subsequently dropped.

Three other new names were drawn into the trial by Reilly. They were Nellie O'Connell, Paulette Dubois and Louise Dubois.

"Do you recall a girl on the steamer the first time you came to this country by the name of Nellie O'Connell?" Reilly asked Miss Gow.

"No," she replied.
"Did you ever know Paulette and Louise Dubois?" he asked.

"No," she answered.
Reilly made no effort to identify Nellie O'Connell or the Dubois girls and everybody was set to wondering who they were. The state made no effort to find out.

GOOD STATE WITNESS
Miss Gow proved to be a strong witness for the defense. Reilly failed to break her story down. She was quick on the trigger. Once he started to say, "now you're a smart woman, Miss Gow" and she interrupted, "yes, I am!" She held her nerve on the stand but collapsed in court shortly after she left the witness chair.

Today, with state police officers charging that the kidnaper of the Lindbergh baby wore woolen socks over his shoes and woolen gloves to obliterate the prints.
The footprints it will be declared were made by size nine shoes, the same size as Hauptmann's shoes.

When the Republicans refused to nominate a candidate for speaker pro tem, Rep. Frank R. Uible (D) Cleveland walked away with the honor. Uible also is Democratic floor leader. Rep. Myron Gessman, Columbus, Republican floor leader, received four complimentary votes for speaker pro tem, though his name was not placed in nomination.

Enjoying a majority of 6 members the Democrats had everything their own way in organizing the state senate, but it was demonstrated to the satisfaction of even the most skeptical that the little group of Republican insurgents are in the saddle in the lower house.

While lack of control there may have serious consequences when the House considers "Ohio New Deal" measures to be dropped into the hopper soon by the administration of Gov.-elect Martin L. Davey, who takes office next Monday, it also provided an excuse for the administration to tender the electorate in the event its sponsored bills receive harsh treatment in the assembly.

After the election of Bittinger and Elsass, there was some talk on the Republican side of the aisle of making another attempt later to wrest nominal control from the Democratic minority, possibly by voting to declare the two offices vacant, then proceeding to try themselves to organize the House when conditions seemed more propitious.

STATUTES SEARCHED
But after going through the constitution and the statutes with a fine-toothed comb, Republican leaders failed to find a loophole they were looking for, and apparently abandoned the idea.

Chief advantage to the Democrats of the speakership was its attendant power to dictate committee assignments. Its value in helping put through Democratic legislation was negligible, but by controlling the important committees only those measures regarded as favorable by the Democrats need ever come up in the House for a vote.

House committee assignments will not be announced for several days, until Speaker Bittinger and his advisers ponder the qualifications and "availability" of the members.

STATE LOAN HEAD NAMED

CLEVELAND, Jan. 8.—From his sickbed in Mt. Sinai hospital, Alfred A. Benesch, appointee of Governor-elect Martin L. Davey for the office of state commerce director, today announced appointment of W. Paul Wagner of Canton as Ohio superintendent of building and loan associations.

It was Benesch's second appointment. He already has named Robert L. Bowen of Cleveland as state superintendent of insurance. Wagner has been president of the Citizens' Savings & Loan association of Canton for 31 years, is a former president of the Ohio State Building and Loan associations league, and is, Mr. Benesch said, "one of the foremost figures in the building and loan field in Ohio."

Wagner will name his own assistants, Benesch said. "This is the first time in the history of the state that a man who was more than a mere accountant or examiner has been named to this post."

Youths Admit Theft

At Village Station

Two youths arrested Monday for theft of wheat and taken to Logan to face charges have confessed robbing the Dan Williamson garage in the Pickaway-co end of Laurelville. The youths are John Williams, 21, and Charles Congrove, 18, both of South Perry.

When Sheriff Charles Radcliff was called Monday afternoon and informed of their arrest he was told they had admitted robbing the Crites Oil Co. filling station two weeks ago. A trip to Logan this morning disclosed the fact that the youths had not robbed the Laurelville establishment.

Radcliff, Officer William McCrady, Prosecutor Ray W. Davis and Gorman Davis, who was the victim of the gunmen, made the trip to Logan.

Mrs. A. L. Wilder left Tuesday afternoon for a visit with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Wittmer, in Canton.

First Woman Chosen

Miss Corrine Lasater

Miss Corrine Lasater, Pauls Valley, Okla., is the first woman to be chosen a director of a federal land bank. She has just been renominated by Governor William I. Myers of the Farm Credit Administration at Washington, as a director of the Federal Land bank at Wichita, Kas., serving the Ninth district of Kansas, Oklahoma, Colorado and New Mexico. Her appointment is for three years. She recently completed her first year.

Cummings' Appearance in Supreme Court Cheers Colleagues in Cabinet

WASHINGTON—The unprecedented action of Homer Cummings in appearing personally before the Supreme Court today to argue a gold case is symbolic. Apparently the Attorney General has awakened to the fact that you can't win law suits without lawyers. Cummings, himself, is an excellent lawyer, but his Justice Department is bogged down with the most lamentable conglomeration of political chair-warmers that ever spit tobacco juice on a cross-roads stove. For that reason Cummings' appearance before the Supreme Court is regarded with great hope by some of his Cabinet colleagues. They hope that this may mark the beginning of new things in the Justice Department. It has been no secret that this department is regarded by many as the weakest link in the New Deal. With some of the most historic legislation before the Supreme Court, various New Deal departments have complained bitterly at the way Homer Cummings' lawyers were handling their cases.

Basic Liberal

This criticism does not apply to Homer Cummings personally. The Attorney General is one of the most popular members of the Cabinet. He is a hard worker, has a delicious sense of humor, stands well with the President and is in step with the liberal sentiment of the New Deal. Illustrative of that liberal sentiment is an incident experienced by Harold M. Stephens, assistant attorney general. Stephens needed some good aides, brought in Henry White Edgerton, who was dismissed from the Cornell law school because he was a conscientious objector during the war—though later taken back with apologies. Stephens suggested to Solicitor General Biggs that Edgerton be hired. He explained his fascist leanings, said he had voted for Norman Thomas in 1932. Biggs almost frothed, vetoed the idea. Stephens then went to Homer Cummings, explained Edgerton's background. "Is he a good lawyer?" Cummings asked. Stephens assured him Edgerton was.

"Then put him on." Cummings has a unique record for this type of fair-minded liberalism. But coupled with it he has three faults which have kept the Justice Department out of step with the basic aims of the New Deal. First, he lacks a sense of smell. Second, he is too amiable. Third, he is too political. It is completely understandable why a Government department has a few deserving Democrats planted around the landscape, but it is another thing to let them be loaded in up to the gunnells.

Before Chicago

This is what Homer let his friend Jim do to him. Homer is not only an easy-going giver-inner to Jim Farley, he is something of a politician in his own behalf. If a Democrat bears the "B. C." (Before Chicago) label he is in the eyes of Homer Cummings, qualified to enter the golden gates no matter what. Thus it was that Cummings insisted on keeping at Attorney General of Puerto Rico, Benjamin J. Horton, whom the Interior Department eventually the President wanted removed. Thus it was that he appointed as judge in the 90 percent Negro Virgin Islands, a Negro hater from Mississippi merely because Pat Harrison was afraid he would run against him in 1936.

Thus it was he appointed as Assistant Attorney General in charge of lands Harry W. Blair, an attorney for a lead company having litigation regarding federal lands, because his wife, Emily Newell Blair was Democratic National Committeewoman from Missouri. Thus also he appointed as an Assistant Attorney General, George

OCT. 16 DATE SET TO BEGIN ANNUAL EVENT

Briggs Sets Up Advantage to Farmer By Date Two Weeks Later

CUTS COMPETITION All Officers and Directors Retain Jobs

The Pumpkin Show society held its first meeting of 1935 Monday evening and voted to stage the big annual affair two weeks later this fall than it has been held in recent years. The dates will be Oct. 16, 17, 18 and 19; in 1934 they were Oct. 3, 4, 5 and 6.

The vote, which was unanimous, came after considerable discussion in which Director Harry J. Briggs stressed the farmers' standpoint. He brought forth the seeding date and other details in such a good argument that the other directors followed his lead. "Last fall," Mr. Briggs said, "when we wanted to stage the pulling contest we had to go out in the fields to get horses that were being worked. As soon as the contest was over we had to immediately return them. It is believed," he declared, "that the show will be much more popular with the farmers if it is later."

Another factor which resulted in the action was that the show in 1934 competed with eight other exhibitions in Ohio with a result that the number of concessions was cut down considerably. The show again as in years prior to the last three or four comes one week after the big Fairfield-co fair at Lancaster.

The move will be popular with upland residents. This fact is pointed out; when the show follows the Lancaster fair all employees of concession stands and other workers come here on Sunday and remain the entire week. When the show is before the Lancaster event the workers usually come in on Tuesday. Two more days of business are provided by the show being later. All officers and directors who served during 1934 were elected and appointed during the evening. Mayor W. E. Cady remains as president by virtue of his office; T. D. Krinn is vice president; R. G. Colville treasurer; Mack Parrett, Jr., secretary; Sterling Lamb assistant secretary; Mr. Colville, director of Dept. 1; L. T. Shamer of Dept. 2; William M. Reid of Dept. 3; G. I. Nickerson of Dept. 4; C. D. McDowell of Dept. 5; L. J. Johnson of Dept. 6; T. D. Keirn of Dept. 7; W. P. Baughman of Dept. 8 and Harry Briggs of Dept. 9.

TO ATTEND BANQUET All officers and directors are making plans to attend the Ohio Fair Managers banquet in Columbus next week.

3 PROPERTIES ARE SOLD BY SHERIFF

Three Pickaway-co properties were sold at sheriff's sales Monday afternoon conducted by Chief Deputy Bryan Custer with C. G. Chalfin as the auctioneer. The Lincoln Kirkpatrick land in Perry-twp was bid in by McKinley Kirk of Washington C. H. at $71.70 per acre. The tract included about 100 acres and was sold to satisfy judgment of Claude Herold, Vinton-co. The McCafferty land in Monroe-twp was purchased by White Furniss, of Scioto-twp, for $63.34 an acre, the total amount being $2,703.98. This sale was a result of a partition action of Roy McCafferty against Alton E. McCafferty.

Sale of the Bell land in Jackson-twp, the result of the partition suit of Elizabeth B. Beaman against Anna T. Wilbur, et al, resulted in its purchase by Grover Rose and Everett Welch, Scioto-twp, for $60.25 an acre. About 100 acres were sold. The sale of the Fannie Zweicker property scheduled to satisfy a claim of the Pickaway-co Finance Co. was cancelled with the action settled and dismissed.

Mrs. Emma Stewart, 67, wife of John Stewart, director of the Farmers' National bank, Williamsport, died suddenly at 4:30 p. m. Monday in the kitchen of her home. Apoplexy was blamed for the cause of death.

Mrs. Stewart had a few minutes before her demise bid good-bye to several callers. Her husband was in the basement firing the furnace when he heard her body strike the floor.

She was one of Williamsport's best known and most active women. Mrs. Stewart was an active member of the Methodist Episcopal church, of the Women's Foreign Missionary society and of the W. C. T. U.

COURT ROOM DARK AS BRUNO IS NAMED

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 8. Lights in Flemington's historic court house went out suddenly today just after Amandaus Hochmuth, elderly witness, identified Bruno R. Hauptmann as the man he had seen in an automobile near Hopewell, N. J., on March 1, 1932, the day Baby Lindbergh was kidnapped.

"Wasn't that dramatic?" Chief Defense Counsel Edward J. Reilly asked sarcastically of reporters in a recess a few minutes later. "I wonder who turned them out?"

Court attaches said a wire break caused the light failure.

Federal, State Men Raid Tar Hollow, Source of Much Illegitimate Liquor.

The source of a lot of the "boot-leg" whiskey which has been reported coming into Circleville and other Ohio cities in recent months was in the hands of federal and state officers today after a raid on Tar Hollow, south of Adelphi in Ross-co, Monday afternoon.

Ten stills, 11,000 gallons of mash and 100 gallons of whiskey were confiscated in the raid. Three men, Earl H. Dearth, 18, of Chillicothe; Charles W. Hunt, 31, and Shirley McDonald, 29, both of near Laurelville, are being held in jail and will be arraigned Monday before the U. S. Commissioner in Chillicothe. They were arrested during the raid.

The stills with a combined capacity of 3,050 gallons were found within a radius of a mile. CHILLICOTHE, Jan. 8.—Four Ross-co roadhouses were raided over the week-end. Four gallons of moonshine and a case of six per cent beer were found at the Blue Gable inn on the Scioto Trail. Sheriff Joe Vincent announced. No criminal charges will be filed, he said, but the roadhouse's license to sell 32 per cent beer will be revoked. In a raid at the Log Cabin, south of this city, three persons were arrested and booked on a statutory charge.

TWO CONTROL PENDULUM OF LOWER HOUSE

Deibel and King Form Insurgent Group; Allow Bitter Election

HAMILTON BEATEN Switch To Put G. O. P. Clerks Across

COLUMBUS, Jan. 8.—Control of the Ohio house of representatives rested today not with the Democrats who named the speaker and clerk or the Republicans who had a majority of one member, but with a small group of Republican insurgents. Voting with the 67 Democrats they elected Rep. J. Freer Bittenger, Ashland, speaker, refraining from voting, they made it possible for the Democrats to name Ex-Rep. Fred Elsass, Sidney, as clerk, and, finally going along with their own party, they turned down the Democratic slate of minor house officers and elected those proposed by the Republican caucus.

DEIBEL IS LEADER Mainstay of the little band of Republican irregulars was Rep. Edmond Deibel, Medina, who braved the cat calls and jeers of his colleagues and the house gallery to bolt the candidacy of Rep. Arthur Hamilton, Lebanon, the Republican's nominee for speaker. Hinting at political intrigue, Deibel stated boldly that "selfish interests" dictated his party's nomination for speaker, adding that "I owe my duty first to my constituents; my party comes second."

He was joined by Rep. E. R. King, (R) McArthur, in voting against Hamilton. King declared "sinister influences are at work in our party" and hoped that his vote would "initiate the beginning of the return of the Republican party to a leadership devoted to interests of the common people."

Rep. B. L. Cressy (R) Andover, long an outstanding independent, aided in electing Elsass over Thomas E. Bateman, choice of the Republican caucus for House clerk, by refraining from voting, as did Deibel. Bateman had served many terms as clerk or assistant in the senate, losing out there this time because of the Democratic majority. Rep. Robert F. Kaser (D) Sidney, nominated Elsass. First defeat of the Democratic minority at the hectic organization session came when the insurgents re-elected the Republican majority, first to reject the minority nominees for sergeants-at-arms and minor clerks, then to help their party put across its own selections for these offices.

MINOR JOBS LISTED

Their Romance Blossomed In RFC

Although attempting to keep their plans to marry a secret until wedding bells chimed, it has been revealed that Miss Helen M. McCollum, 25, secretary in the RFC in Washington, and daughter of a bricklayer, is betrothed to William Dern, son of Secretary of War George Dern. The Cinderella romance blossomed in the Reconstruction Finance Corporation offices where Dern was employed until last year. No date has been set for the wedding.

Flemington Court Room Showing Strain of Trial

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 8.—Stifling with heat and humanity, the little court room here where Bruno Richard Hauptmann's life is hanging in the balance already is showing the strain of proceedings which observers estimate will last from four to six weeks.

Only four days old, the proceedings already have the jurors tossing in their seats. Attorney General David T. Wilentz's temper is not quite so restrained as at first. More and more frequently spectators burst into unrestrained laughter. More and more frequently they are reprimanded by Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, and more and more frequently the judge is rising to tread back and forth behind the bench.

STAMPEDE FOR SEATS Curious walk on each other's feet in the twice-daily stampede for seats and the former prevailing good fellowship takes a left to the jaw. Now the business of getting a seat has become deadly serious and an issue for unsavory jostling and shoving and crabbing.

The harried telegraph messengers are no more the half-smiling well-met group of those first few days and press and telegraph rooms have become veritable madhouses. It was the signal for collapse of Betty Gow, who established herself on the stand as a little lady—and an adorable one. It is the signal, too, for numerous wranglings by attorneys. Time and again they close in on each other, barking, yelling, jumping up with objections, sending the high-strung audience into gales of laughter.

The heat in the tiny room, which has held tremendous crowds since the opening of the trial, is intense. To all appearances the coolest man in the place is Attorney General Wilentz, sleek, black-haired, perfectly-groomed, who drinks glass after glass of water and mon-brow incessantly, pulling his white handkerchief from his breast pocket with dash, waving it, and replacing it in an instant.

When Reilly interrogated Col. Charles A. Lindbergh last Friday he asked the father of the slain baby if it ever occurred to him that "Jafsie" might have inserted the ransom advertisements in the Bronx newspaper and answered them himself. Lindbergh, however, expressed complete confidence in Dr. Condon.

In questioning Mrs. Elsie Whately, widow of the late Ollie Whately the Lindbergh butler, Reilly asked her if it was not a fact that she and her husband had known Dr. Condon when they lived in New Rochelle, N. Y., in 1930 and 1931. Condon may not go on the stand until tomorrow. After several police officers testify today, the state plans to call Col. Henry Brockmire, close personal friend of Lindbergh and John Peronne, the Bronx taxi driver who says Hauptmann gave him $1 to deliver a note to Condon's home. There (Continued On Page Six)

FEAR TANK SHIP'S CREW LOST AT SEA

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 8.—Fear for the safety of 25 to 35 men in the crew of the British oil tanker La Cressenta was expressed here today. The tanker, enroute from Port San Luis to San Francisco, was overdue two weeks in the Orient.

She was last reported 900 miles northeast of Hawaii. An ominous message was relayed here yesterday by another British tanker, the Albatross, which passed through the straits of 25-42 north latitude, 164 west longitude. British tanker La Cressenta last heard from that vicinity.

Carper To Receive Hearing For Parole Sisco Carper, who was convicted Feb. 2, 1932, for manslaughter on the death of his father, will receive a parole hearing at the Mahoning reformatory Feb. 1. J. J. Freer, parole clerk, announced today.

Carper, a resident of Whistler, Pa., was sentenced to one to 20 years term. The badly decomposed body of his father was found in a woods several weeks ago and is reported missing.

"JAFSIE" NEXT STAR WITNESS IN LINDY CASE

Defense Is Expected to Train Its Big Guns on $50,000 Negotiator

WILL NAME "JOHN" Betty Gow Proves Asset To State Case

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN COURTROOM, Flemington, N. J., Jan. 8.—Amandaus Hochmuth, an 87-year-old resident of Hopewell, N. J., left the witness stand today at the murder trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann and dramatically placed his hand on the defendant saying he was the man he saw in an automobile near Hopewell on the morning of March 1, 1932. It was on that night baby Lindbergh was kidnapped.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Jan. 8.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann's defense was preparing today to train its big guns on Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon, the Lindbergh negotiator who is soon to be called to the stand as a star witness for the state.

Already Edward J. Reilly, the big, blasé chief counsel for the defense, is laying ground work for an attack on Condon who is expected to say on the stand that Hauptmann is the man to whom he paid over the $50,000 ransom in St. Raymond's cemetery in the Bronx.

HINTS ACQUAINTANCE

Reilly, in cross-examining Miss Betty Gow, the Lindbergh baby's nurse, asked her if she was a visitor with Violet Sharpe on a boat owned by Dr. Condon prior to the kidnapping. Her answer was "no." Miss Sharpe, who committed suicide during the Lindbergh investigation, was a maid employed in the home of Mrs. Anne Lindbergh's mother at Englewood, N. J. When Reilly interrogated Col. Charles A. Lindbergh last Friday he asked the father of the slain baby if it ever occurred to him that "Jafsie" might have inserted the ransom advertisements in the Bronx newspaper and answered them himself. Lindbergh, however, expressed complete confidence in Dr. Condon.

In questioning Mrs. Elsie Whately, widow of the late Ollie Whately the Lindbergh butler, Reilly asked her if it was not a fact that she and her husband had known Dr. Condon when they lived in New Rochelle, N. Y., in 1930 and 1931. Condon may not go on the stand until tomorrow. After several police officers testify today, the state plans to call Col. Henry Brockmire, close personal friend of Lindbergh and John Peronne, the Bronx taxi driver who says Hauptmann gave him $1 to deliver a note to Condon's home. There (Continued On Page Six)

SALES TAX AIDES TO BE APPOINTED

COLUMBUS, Jan. 8.—Appointment of more than 100 agents to aid county treasurers throughout Ohio in selling sales tax coupons to merchants will be announced within a few days by the state treasurer's office, Harry S. Day, of Fremont, state treasurer, told the "sales tax meeting" of county treasurers here today. Day also was able to still complaints of many county officials over their allegedly low "cut" for handling the stamps by a statement that the state treasurer's office had drawn up an amendment to be submitted to the legislature which will change the county treasurers' share from one-tenth of one percent to a flat one percent. Although Day declared that he anticipated some objection from the county treasurers over the plan to establish agencies inasmuch as it would withdraw revenue from their office, he said that consideration of the public and merchants must come first.

ROSE IS SPEAKER

Rev. W. B. (Uncle Sam) Rose, venerable minister, made a fine talk before the Kiwanis club Monday evening in his "The Golden Rule" message. He stressed the value of service and said: "Our greatest mission in life is service." Rev. W. B. (Uncle Sam) Rose, twp, attended the meeting as a new member.

"RUNNING HOG WILD"

A WISCONSIN jurist, inspired by the rising toll of death and injury and the appearance before him of an unending succession of reckless and drunken drivers, observed that "motorists appear to be running hog wild."

This conclusion can be supported by any careful motorist who is required to make his way on the highways against the competition of drivers without the least regard for the rights of others, or by pedestrians who venture down from the curb at the risk of their lives.

Shocking statistics show that every fifteen minutes in the year that just ended someone was killed in an automobile accident; every thirty-one seconds someone was injured on the streets and highways.

Motor vehicle authorities and police have conducted campaigns of education and editors have viewed with alarm. The courts have issued solemn warnings and legislators have insisted that there ought to be a law.

Nevertheless, the cowardly hit-and-run drivers have grown in number and citizens are being tossed up on the curb to be picked up by some bystander and taken to the hospital. Others are being forced off the road and into a ditch or telegraph pole.

The year 1934 closed with an all-time high record of 35,000 traffic deaths and about one million injuries. It is a death toll as great as the number of Americans killed in battle during the World war.

What are the causes? They are numerous. Primarily, however, responsibility lies with the human element—the person at the wheel, who may be drunk or sober, careful or reckless.

In addition, they include the manufacturers who produce high-speed models for which there is no legitimate need, and the presence on the highways and streets of ramshackle cars, defective in many ways and unfit for use.

UPWARD

If there is anything in this state-of-mind stuff, the American people have been in the state of mind for a depression these last five years and are now in the state of mind for a speedy economic recovery.

The psychological change which has taken place in the last few weeks is remarkable. It proves again, as it was proved in 1929, that the American mind is susceptible to quick changes.

Business has become infected with the new spirit. Steel, the backbone of the industrial body, is doing things in a big way, which means that there is renewed activity in many other lines, including roadbuilding.

The stock market during the last few days has been reminiscent of the boom days from which one can draw but one conclusion, that the investing public considers the bottom reached and the long awaited upward trend begun. It has been the sort of a market which breathes confidence of an enduring sort.

Pessimism is dead! Long live optimism!

POLITICS MIXES IN CRIME

DIRECTOR Hoover, of the division of investigation of the United States department of justice, gave expression to a bright ideal when speaking before the federal crime conference. He said that law enforcement officers should be appointed on the basis of merit, and not be "forced to seek office from some political ward-heeler."

"In too many communities the requisites are an ability to vote for the right man and a pandering instinct necessary to hold a position which can be plucked away—at the displeasure of a political boss." The condition is exactly as described by Mr. Hoover. Unfortunately, it is not one that can be remedied easily under our present system of government.

The great leader is one who never permits his followers to discover that he is as dumb as they are.

The battle of the bonus will be a chief debate before congress. You can't keep a good fight down, or a bad one, either.

In searching about for a proper classification for Huey Long we find that he doesn't even qualify as a noble experiment.

Little Sister

by MARGARET WIDDERMER

READ THIS FIRST:

After reading a letter from her reckless young sister, Bet, announcing her proposed elopement with a carpenter, Leila Madison rushes to New York from her suburban home to meet the girl who has run away. The sisters are orphans and members of an old Westchester family. Arriving outside her sister's apartment, Leila, who virtually is engaged to Orion Johnston-Hedges, her aristocratic neighbor, runs into Jerry Redmond, 16, top as "Tommy" at Yale of the brother of Bet's fiance, is striving to halt the elopement. Jerry says the prospective bridegroom is Addison Huntington, a romantic radical, masquerading as Stark Freeman. Leila and Jerry find Bet and her roommate, Edna, waiting for Addison. He arrives a moment later. Jerry tells Addison the police want to question him about an acquaintance of his named Jarecki so they disguise Addison in girl's clothes. The police arrive and promise to return when they cannot find Stark Freeman, or, reminding the guard, outside the apartment. Jerry explains why he is trying to save Addison from the police. (NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 10

FINALLY LEILA'S curiosity—mixed with suspicion that the notes might have something to do with their present mess—got too much for her.

"What are you writing in that book?" she demanded.

He smiled at her; a bright and winning smile.

"Did you ever know a reporter who wasn't doing the great American novel?" he demanded.

"I never knew a reporter," she said coldly.

"You remind me of the old wheezers. 'How do you pronounce Chicago here? We never pronounce it at all.' All right, lady, I am completely witted. But after all, you asked me. And I told you the truth. People never do believe the Irish."

"Are you Irish?"

"Well, there were some kings, a few hundred years back. My own glorious branch of the Redmonds got here not as long ago as that."

"Thank you. I'm sorry I was rude. Usually I'm a little angel of politeness and control—the sensible sister who keeps the family together. Leila did not know how touchingly help- less her eyelashes made her at this moment—'I'm having rather a hard afternoon.'"

Jerry smiled his dazzling smile at her again. "Sure, you're having a pretty time. Never mind, you poor kid. I'll see you through it. Here are the policemen both back. Brace up."

"He had, as Leila was to learn with fury, before all was through, a habit of whistling appropriate music practically whenever he wasn't talking. He began to hum the music of—"

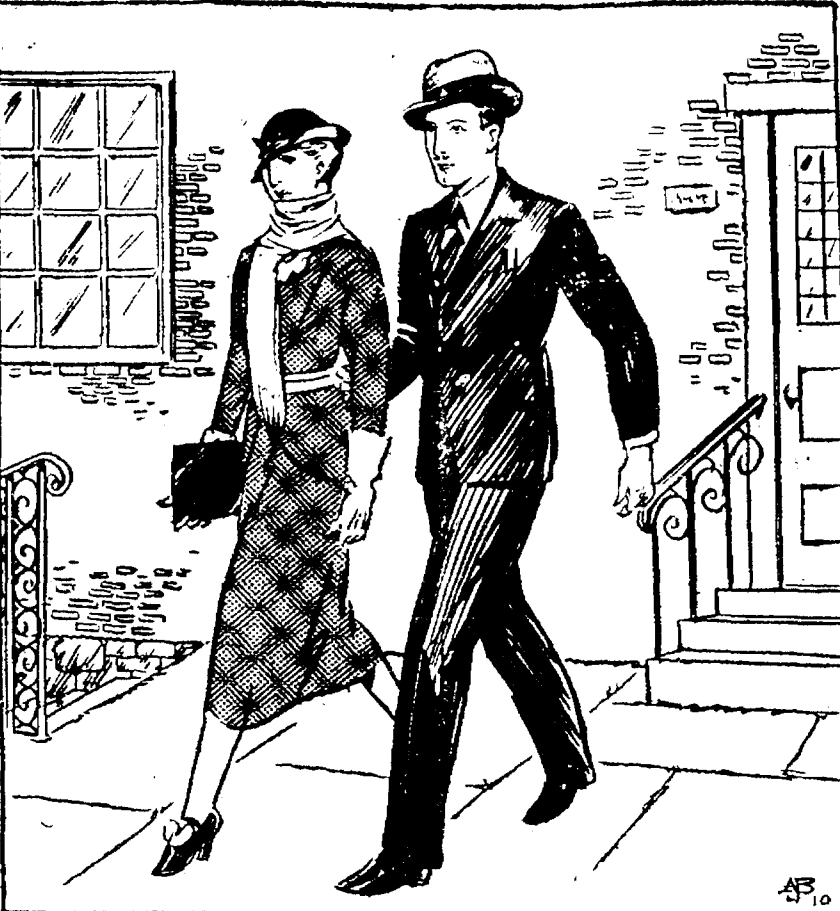

"Taking one consideration with another, a policeman's lot is not a happy one."

In time to the heavy footsteps of the force, who, hot and weary, were adding their final inquisition for Addison and his comrade, Mr. Jarecki.

"What do we do now?" demanded Leila. "Sit tight—or rather, get up and greet the dawn. Here it is, coming round to dig us out of our pretty little love-nest."

He rose to his feet, helping Leila, as the policemen appeared.

"Oh, here you are, Redmond," said the policeman who was the older acquaintance. "You got patience, I'll say that for you. Well, if the Freeman guy is here, Buck will find him. Knows him by sight. Little skinny,

"Patience, sweetheart"

sandy guy, didn't you say, Buck?"

But he smiled, and would have insulted an officer of the law if Jerry hadn't put a hand over his mouth.

"All right, officer," said Jerry politely. "Gaze at us. One black-haired girl, one taller chestnut girl, one sitting artistic girl, one sandy girl, one full-size reporter with whiskers to deceive you."

The policeman grinned reluctantly. "All right, too. Names, and you can get out."

Jerry became courteous and business-like. Leila noticed with reluctant approval that he knew when to fool and when to be serious.

"You know who I am—Redmond, free-lance, and special correspondent for the Evening Globe, when I'm not at home. The lady who is at work is Miss Berry. These other girls are Elizabeth and Leila Madison, and their friend, Grace Perkins. They come in today to see Mr. Jarecki. They live in Fernwood Manor. You probably saw their car downstairs."

"And the one that paints is fond of the Freeman guy," said the policeman ponderously.

Jerry edged up closer and began to whisper.

"Exactly. That's where I come in. I want an exclusive story. 'Chum of Westchester society girl falls for racketeer. Schoolmate of girl held of well-known Heathcote kennels. Persuades her back to the social round. Comes in with prize-winning Scottie. Heathcote, Heart's Queen, to take her to family estate. Chum refuses. Love and art are all that matter!' I want it for next Sunday."

"Well, you got a nerve, you news-paper boys. I thought you just wanted a line in color." (Bet's shudders at this horrible idea was offered. She had met the tabloids before.) "Well, it might help catch the little Freeman guy at that. I don't think he was the one that really had much to do with the funny money," said the policeman tolerantly. "Seemed one of these honest little mugs 's I remember. Jarecki's the bird we really want, only we got to jug Freeman first and get the dope."

The lady in Bet's blue suit opened her mouth and stepped forward indignantly. Jerry's iron hand clamped down on her narrow shoulder. The policeman scarcely noticed; he loved society. "Which is Miss Madison's sister that has the kennels?" he asked reverently.

"This one," Jerry indicated Leila. "Miss Leila Madison of Westchester and Park avenue," he lied brightly. "The other lady is her friend, Miss Perkins; you remember her; she took the prize for the best costume at the Benux-Art ball."

He held Miss Perkins firmly down. "Awright. You can go. And believe me, it's no treat to us to go messing round riding herd on pink nuts, as to an equal. He moved away, his boots sounding enormously on the bare floor in the hot dusk.

Jerry took a long breath and removed his hand from his friend's shoulder. Leila felt very limp inside, as if a tidal wave had just gone round the other way. Bet began to weep loudly.

"Oh, do stop that," Leila said wearily.

"The rest, like the end of most exciting struggles, was tame. Jerry, escorting the middle-sized, rather awkward lady who was Addison, passed out with the girls and Jane.

"All right, buddy. Pass along. Mail me a copy of the paper, kid. The name's Flynn, Seventh precinct."

"Sure, you'll see it in the paper," Jerry assured him benignly. They went. "Goodbye, Miss Berry. You're a good sport. I hope it comes out right," he dared to throw over his shoulder.

"Thanks a lot," said Edna Berry, and shifted her mirrors and painted on.

"I would like," said Addison from under his scarf, in as proud and injured a voice as Bet's own, as they gained the street, "to find a place where I can roll my shirt sleeves down."

"Patience, sweetheart," said Jerry cheerily. "Leila, gimme the keys."

She was past asserting herself; she felt like the over-worked woman of the old suffrage story she had heard Mrs. Johnston-Hedges quote: "If there is anything the menfolk will do, let 'em do it!"

Neglect of Simple Cyst A Dangerous Procedure

These Tumors, Usually Harmless, May Become Malignant If Treatment Is Delayed

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

MANY PERSONS believe cysts and tumors are cancerous. Of course, the tumor may be malignant in its nature but in most cases it is likely to be harmless and not at all dangerous to the health and life of the afflicted person. In most instances, a cyst is a "perfectly harmless" tumor. By this I do not mean that it should be neglected.

One of the most common types of cyst is that known as a "sebaceous cyst." This form of tumor is commonly found on the skin, especially of the scalp, behind the ear, or it may be in the armpit. As a rule it is always found in an area of the body where hair is present.

The sebaceous glands are found in the skin and manufacture an oily secretion. The sebaceous cyst is formed by an obstruction of the outlet of a sebaceous gland. As a result of this obstruction the material normally expelled by the gland accumulates within it, leading to the formation of a cystic mass. This mass or tumor may grow rapidly, but usually it grows slowly and eventually may reach an amazing size. Cysts as large as a hen's egg located in the scalp are not at all uncommon.

Occasionally the cyst may rupture and expel its contents. But the opening may close and there is a return of the tumor mass. In that case the cyst will regain its former size.

Contrary to popular belief, a cyst can be cured only by complete surgical removal. The application of ointments and rubs is of no avail and sometimes may prove irritating.

A Simple Operation
Unfortunately, many persons neglect this simple trouble. Many avoid medical attention because they fear the knife. But the operation is so simple, there is no need for alarm. It is performed in the doctor's office and need cause no disability. A local anesthetic is used, preventing all pain.

Frequently I am asked whether neglect of a cyst or simple tumor is dangerous. I advise the removal of all cysts because neglect may lead to irritation and infection. An infected cyst is painful, requiring prolonged care and even after the delayed operation is performed. Much time and discomfort are saved by early attention.

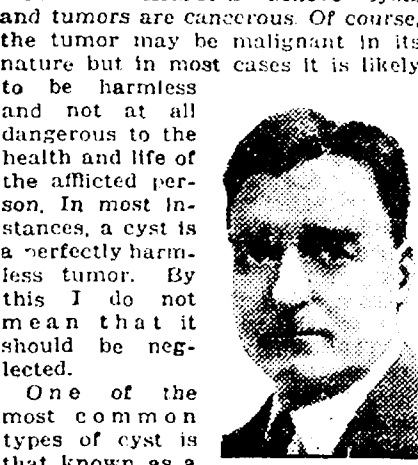

Many authorities believe that prolonged irritation and neglect of a simple tumor or cyst may lead to cancer. Of course, this does not mean that every cyst has in it this possibility, but the remote possibility must not be overlooked.

Do not confuse a cyst with a boil or other skin infection. Unless infected a cyst is painless. It grows slowly in most cases and causes no discomfort. But it is annoying and, if neglected, certainly it is wise to have it removed.

Answers to Health Queries

A.—This may be due to an underlying nasal condition. Have an examination. In the meantime keep the nasal passages and throat as clear as possible. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and print your question.

MONDAY CLUB STUDIES PSYCHOLOGY AT MEETING

The Monday club met in regular session Monday evening in the trustee's room in Memorial hall with Mrs. Hildeburn Jones, the president, presiding.

The program was given by the psychology division of which Mrs. Clark Hunsicker is chairman.

"The Psychology of Dreams" was the subject of a paper by Mrs. Howard Jones. She said in part: "People have always been interested in dreams and suspected that they were symbolical. Today we ponder our dreams and search them for a meaning. Dreams have been considered either as foolish visions or as solemn warnings from the Gods. They are neither. They are important productions of human mind and in a few years it is predicted that physicians while treating physical ailments will make it their business to inquire about their patients' dreams."

"Dream interpretation is not idle pastime. It reveals to us our attitude to every problem of life for we spend our nights seeking solutions to our problems. Today every book on psychology devotes much time to dreams."

Mrs. John Dunlap Sr., in her paper on "The Psychology of Fear" said among other things: "We think our thoughts and act as consciously determined and their motives fully known to us, that they are free from bias, superstition and prejudice. On the contrary, it can be shown that thinking plays a small part in our lives; that we are controlled by cravings, fears, urges, jealousies and hopes which seethe below the level of consciousness in the unconscious mind and that it is this dynamic part of the mind, which, unknown to us, pulls the strings regulating the greater part of what we think, do and feel. It sometimes plays tricks and takes complete control of the intellect.

"Fear is caused by something which threatens us and to which we feel unequal. Modern psychology has proven that fears are often groundless and that if we meet fear in the open we can conquer it through suggestion and re-education along with plain common sense. Interest in other people and other things will help us to attain this fearless state of mind but the only person who can conquer fear for you or me is yourself and myself. When self is forgotten, the most of our fears will take wings and fly away."

FIND MUCH WASTE OF ALFALFA SEED

Experiments Show Rates of 10 to 12 Pounds An Acre Are Right.

A lot of alfalfa seed is wasted in Ohio each year.

Although seeding rates of 20 to 25 pounds an acre are frequently recommended, farm experience and experiment station trials in Ohio point to 10 or 12 pounds as the best seeding rate on most soils.

This information is contained in a publication entitled "Alfalfa in Ohio," now being distributed by the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station.

The bulletin, over a hundred pages long, sums up the results of more than a score of years of experimental work in Ohio with the crop.

Seed rates of over 10 pounds an acre gave no increase in yields of hay and indeed, even an increase from 7½ pounds to 10 increased the yield only 4 per cent, it is stated in the bulletin.

Neither does thick seeding lead to a higher percentage of leaves, or to a more valuable hay. The same appears to be true as to the protein contents of crops seeded at different rates.

Eight pounds are as little as one would usually care to risk sowing under even the most favorable conditions, and if 15 pounds will not give a satisfactory stand, there is no use in throwing still more seed away, concludes the bulletin.

Owing to the current shortage of alfalfa and other legume seeds, it is expected that farmers will be more economical in their use next spring, in the opinion of C. J. Willard, one of the authors of the bulletin.

Marian Martin Pattern

Complete, Diagrammed Marian Martin Sew Chart Included.
PATTERN 9170

If you've been opening your closet-door lately and emitting a well-known feminine wail "I simply haven't got a thing to wear," what you probably need to set matters right again is a spirited two-piece silk or wool frock such as the one sketched today. The blouse with square buttons marching up the front—perky tab collar and well-tailored sleeves that end in trim tabs at the wrist—is about the last word in smartness. And the skirt is frothy by a nice panel that breaks into two jaunty pleats. Change the neckline effect by slipping a colorful triangular scarf beneath the tabs or by tying a gay bow at the throat—very chic!

Pattern 9170 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30 and 32. Size 16 requires 2½ yards 54 inch fabric and ¾ yard contrasting.

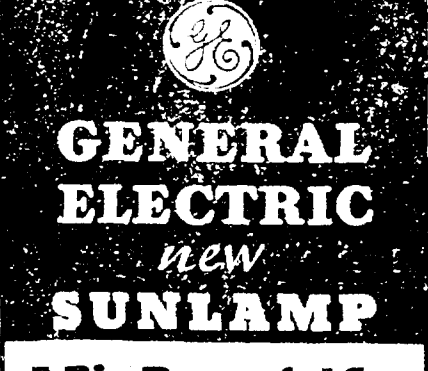

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for EACH MARIAN MARTIN pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE of each pattern.

Do not miss our WINTER PATTERN BOOK of smart, easy-to-make clothes designed by our style authority, MARIAN MARTIN. Styles for every age and all occasions. PRICE OF BOOK FIFTEEN CENTS. BOOK AND PATTERN TOGETHER TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

Send your order to The Herald Pattern Department, 124 W. Main-st., Circleville, O.

IOWA, INDIANA LEAD PARADE; STATE VICTOR

Both Unbeaten as Big Ten
Race is Enlivened; State
Comes From Behind.

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—Four games in which Illinois whipped the title-defending Purdue quintet and Wisconsin defeated a strong Northwestern five, today left Iowa and Indiana leading the Western conference basketball race.

While the Illini were fighting an uphill battle to eke out a 37 to 35 victory over Purdue at Champaign last night, Wisconsin held Northwestern almost powerless at Madison to win by a 16 to 9 count.

Iowa scored its second Big Ten victory of the season with a 39 to 29 decision over Chicago at Iowa City.

In an overtime game at Ann Arbor, Mich., Ohio State defeated Michigan, 33 to 30.

BOTH UNBEATEN
Iowa and Indiana, undefeated, head the conference standings. Minnesota, considered a strong championship threat, has yet to play its first conference opponent.

A late rally by Illinois accounted for Purdue's first defeat of the year. Frank Froeschauer was the victors' mainstay in the hard fought battle, scoring 13 points with his six baskets and free throw.

Purdue held a 20 to 17 lead at the half. Six thousand fans witnessed the battle.

Wisconsin presented an air tight defense that held Lyle Fisher, Northwestern's star forward, to one field goal. Ed Stegman, Badger center, starred for Wisconsin with three baskets and three free throws. At the half the score was tied 6 to 6. A capacity crowd of 8,550 saw the game.

Iowa's quintet was off to a flying start in the first half and the period ended, despite a Chicago rally, at 16 to 12.

SPREE FEATURE

Ohio State and Michigan went into the overtime period knotted at 25 all after the Buckeyes had come from behind midway in the second half. At the half Ohio State was trailing 15 to 10, but came back with a rush. A six point scoring spree by Michigan in the last two minutes of the regulation time forced the overtime period.

CANTON MENTOR TO KENT STATE?

CANTON, Jan. 8.—Despite persistent denials from Kent, Jimmy Aiken, who coached Canton McKinley to the mythical Ohio interscholastic football championship last fall, will be appointed coach at Kent State college within the next two weeks it was reported here today.

The report also declared that Russ Beichley, Akron West high mentor, would be named assistant to Aiken in the new set-up at the Kent school.

According to the report, official announcement of Aiken's appointment as athletic director and head football coach to succeed Joe Bregala will be made at a meeting of the Kent state board of trustees on Jan. 15.

Aiken will receive a salary of $4,500 a year and will sign a three-year contract, it was said. It was further stated that Aiken is planning to have several members of his Canton championship squad enroll at Kent in the fall as the nucleus of his initial team.

BOWLERS DEFEATED

Two Circleville bowling teams took it on the chin Sunday at Washington C. H. The Bakers were beaten 2904 to 2923, while the Circleville Five dropped before the Sabina Merchants rolling only 2194 against 2771.

On the Baker team were Bessie Riggins, Elsie, Campbell and Baker while Pearce, Elsie, Campbell and Baker were defeated by the Sabina Merchants.

About This And That

BY THE
SECOND GUESSER

DYE BEATS MICHIGAN

Last fall Bill Dyer, Ohio State's captain, led his team to a 10-0 record in the Big Ten. That seems to be a pretty good record. During the Big Ten season, he backs up a 10-0 record. In games played so far in the Big Ten they have split even with Iowa, but defeating Michigan, which event came last night, 33-30, with Tippy Dye, catching two goals in an overtime period.

WHAT! BASEBALL?

An untold outfield composed of Radeloff, Washington, and Dan Herby and a poor catching staff of Shea, Paul, Cathamer and Fenner are important parts in the success of Chicago's White Sox. Cincinnati has sent two athletes to Newark of the International League in the Sammy Byrd deal. They are Kleinhans, who were the Columbus uniform for a short while, and Nolan Richardson, infielder.

CAGE RESULTS

Other Big Ten results last night were:
Wisconsin, 16; Northwestern, 9.
Iowa, 39; Chicago, 29.
Illinois, 37; Purdue, 36.
Capital City League:
Morrey Jewellers, 28; Buckeye Stages, 15.
Mendel Tailors, 37; Federal Glass, 24.
Trout Confectioners, 27; Bolt Works, 26.

WEEK'S SCHEDULE

CBL schedule this week includes Circleville at Delaware; Bexley at Marietta; and Grandview at Westerville.
County schedule includes: Walnut at Mullenberg; Scioto at Pickaway; Darby at Teerbrook; Perry at Monroe; Jackson at Ashville; Salter Creek at Washington.

STRENGTH OF BUCKEYE TEAMS TO GET RIGID TEST THIS WEEK

DELAWARE, Jan. 8.—Comparative strength of Buckeye conference basketball teams will be afforded this week when each of the five plays at least one league game.

Marshall, whose early season games have been few, will be tested at Delaware tonight when the Thundering Herd meets Ohio Wesleyan, which successfully opened its drive for another Buckeye title by defeating Miami, 35 to 14, last Saturday night.

COLUMBIAN PLAN NOW IN DISCARD

COLUMBUS, Jan. 8.—Twenty-four thousand depositors of the Columbus Building and Loan Co. will receive a 15 per cent dividend amounting to about $2,350,000 soon as a result of the scrapping of a proposed plan for reorganization into a mortgage, loan and real estate company. A petition for approval of a reorganization plan will be withdrawn from court.

Although Ohio Wesleyan has been given the top ranking by many in picking a probable Buckeye cage champion, a rising sentiment is beginning to choose Cincinnati as a probable dark horse, although Ohio university also enters into the picture when championship prospects are discussed.

fore the state may not get around to calling Condon to the stand until tomorrow.

MAY NAME NONE

Reilly, who last week promised on next Thursday to name "two women and at least two men" as the kidnappers, is still casting about of mystery around the identity of these four persons. Doubt is now arising that he will specifically name any four persons.

In the meantime Reilly is drawing the names of a lot of persons into the case in a manner which is provoking all kinds of conjecture. For example, he asked Miss Gow if she had corresponded with young men in Detroit, where she had worked for about six months in 1930. She had not.

"Did you ever know a man there named Abe Wagner?" he asked her.

"No," she replied.

Wagner was identified with the notorious "Purple Gang" of Detroit. For a time during the Lindbergh case investigators ran down clues tending to involve the "Purple Gang" but these leads were subsequently dropped.

Three other new names were drawn into the trial by Reilly. They were Nellie O'Connell, Paulette Dubois and Louise Dubois.

"Do you recall a girl on the steamer the first time you came to this country by the name of Nellie O'Connell?" Reilly asked Miss Gow.

"No," she replied.

"Did you ever know Paulette and Louise Dubois?" he asked.

"No," she answered.

Reilly made no effort to identify Nellie O'Connell or the Dubois girls and everybody was set to wondering who they were. The state made no effort to find out.

GOOD STATE WITNESS

Miss Gow proved to be a strong witness for the defense. Reilly failed to break her story down. She was quick on the trigger. Once he started to say, "now you're a smart woman, Miss Gow," and she interrupted, "Yes, I am." She held her nerves on the stand but collapsed in court shortly after she left the witness chair.

Today, with state police officers on the stand, the prosecution will charge that the kidnaper of the Lindbergh baby wore woolen socks over his shoes and woolen gloves to obliterate the prints.

The footprints, it will be developed, were made by size nine shoes, the same size as Hauptmann's shoes.

PLOW EARLY TO SAVE MOISTURE

Plow as early as possible, to conserve moisture. This is the suggestion of Richard Bradford, agronomist at the Ohio State university, who finds that in 1930 and 1931 Ohio had a rainfall about equal to the normal rainfall for western Kansas and Nebraska.

Bradford says that "it is high time for us to be thinking rather seriously about the drought problem, and ways to reduce its ravages." Bradford adds, "though plowing land if there is no danger of erosion, is an ideal condition for absorbing the heavy rains that are headed for in March."

He says every foot of soil of average texture is capable of storing and holding against the pull of gravity the equivalent of about 3 inches of rainfall. In a soil 8 feet deep there is a storage capacity of 24 inches, 3 inches more than Ohio has had all year.

The average rainfall for January, February and March is about 3 inches a month. If every drop of normal rain fell from now until April 1 runs into the soil, the total is 9 or 10 inches, which Bradford says is only half enough to fill our soil to its field capacity.

From 200 to 1,000 pounds of water are required by growing plants to produce 1 pound of dry matter. A single corn stalk may absorb and transpire through its leaves as much as 25 gallons of water during its development. This amount, for a full stand of corn to grow 2 inches of water, an amount in excess of the average rainfall during the corn-growing season. The difference must be drawn from the reserve of moisture accumulated in the soil in winter and early spring months.

When the Republicans refused to nominate a candidate for speaker pro tem, Rep. Frank C. Cole (D) Cleveland walked away with the honor. Uble also is Democratic floor leader. Rep. Myron Gossman, Columbus, Republican floor leader, received four complimentary votes for speaker pro tem, though his name was not placed in nomination.

Enjoying a majority of 6 members the Democrats had everything their own way in organizing the state senate, but it was demonstrated to the satisfaction of even the most skeptical that the anti-group of Republican insurgents are in the saddle in the lower house.

While lack of control there may have serious consequences when the House considers "Ohio New Deal" measures to be dropped into the hopper soon by the administration of Governor-elect Martin L. Davey, who takes office next Monday, it also provided an excuse for the administration to tender the election to the event its sponsored bills receive harsh treatment in the assembly.

After the election of Bittinger and Elsass, there was some talk on the Republican side of the aisle of making another attempt later to wrest nominal control from the Democratic minority, possibly by voting to declare the two offices vacant, then proceeding to try themselves to organize the House when conditions seemed more propitious.

STATUTES SEARCHED

But after going through the constitution and the statutes with a fine-toothed comb, Republican leaders failed to find a loophole they were looking for, and apparently abandoned the idea.

Chief advantage to the Democrats of the speakership was its attendant power to dictate committee assignments. Its value in helping put through Democratic legislation was negligible, but by controlling the important committees only those measures regarded as favorable by the Democrats could ever come up in the House for a vote.

House committee assignments will not be announced for several days, until Speaker Bittinger and his advisers ponder the qualifications and "availability" of the members.

STATE LOAN HEAD NAMED

CLEVELAND, Jan. 8.—From his sickbed in Mt. Sinai hospital, Alfred A. Benesch, appointee of Governor-elect Martin L. Davey for the office of state, commerce director, today announced appointment of W. Paul Wagner of Canton as Ohio superintendent of building and loan associations.

It was Benesch's second appointment. He already has named Robert L. Bowen of Cleveland as state superintendent of insurance. Wagner has been president of the Citizens' Savings & Loan association of Canton for 31 years, is a former president of the Ohio State Building and Loan associations league and is, Mr. Benesch said, "one of the foremost figures in the building and loan field in Ohio."

Wagner will name his own assistants, Benesch said. "This is the first time in the history of the state that a man who was more than a mere accountant or examiner has been named to this post."

Youths Admit Theft At Village Station

Two youths arrested Monday for theft of wheat and taken to Logan to face charges have confessed robbing the Dan Williamson garage in the Pickaway-co end of Laurelville. The youths are John Williams, 21, and Charles Congrove, 18, both of South Perry.

When Sheriff Charles Radcliff was called Monday afternoon and informed of their arrest, he was told they had admitted robbing the Crites Oil Co. filling station two weeks ago. A trip to Logan this morning disclosed the fact that the youths had not robbed this station but had broken into the Laurelville establishment.

Radcliff, Officer William McCrady, Prosecutor Ray W. Davis and Gorman Davis, who was the victim of the gunmen, made the trip to Logan.

Mrs. A. L. Wilder left Tuesday afternoon for a visit with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Wittmer, in Canton.
